After you play the Introduction Video, print out the External Computer Anatomy Study Guide and Computer Anatomy Assignment Checklist. You will demonstrate your knowledge of the names and functions of the components comprising a typical computer workstation. You will study components such as the central processing unit, monitor, keyboard, mouse, and multimedia speakers. Using the CSS courseware and web as a resource, you will also compile a list of definitions associated with these types of devices. Finally, you will demonstrate your skill by completing a computer-proctored exam at the end of the unit.
